Study in Europe

and be part of an intensive, interdisciplinary program that combines agricultural systems, regional food production and their significance in creating sustainable landscapes.

Our Beauvais Campus:

You will live in one of UniLaSalle’s student residence halls, located on a safe, 10-acre pedestrian campus just North of downtown.

Beauvais is a lovely mid-size town, just an hour away by train from Paris. In addition, Beauvais’ international airport is home to low-cost and charter airlines; Barcelona, Vienna or Dublin, to name a few, are just a short plane ride away.

Objectives:
The emergence of monocultures in farming, the rise of convenience food and gradual loss of food knowledge have created a growing interest in locally sourced and sustainable produced food. This interest also reveals the need for a sense of place with a rising number of consumers. Food, it seems, has an increasingly important role to play in creating and maintaining sustainable landscapes. This summer course compares agricultural systems in France and Italy and addresses topics such as innovative initiatives in food production and processing, food quality labels, and landscape research. The course will benefit students in agricultural economics, environmental sciences, food sciences or landscape sciences or related disciplines.

Dates:
On campus program: May 20 – June 14, 2019
Work placement: June 15 – July 17, 2019
